Next stop: Your name here?

Program will target corporations, but with enough cash customers could name a T station ◗ T revives 10-year-old idea to possibly generate revenue ◗ GM Davey is hoping to sell naming rights in lieu of a fare hike

▶ Could Park Street station be the next place to don the name of a major corporation?

Picture it — you leave McDonald's Station at Park Street and arrive at Starbuck's Landing on the Green Line.

From there, you walk to the Dunkin' Donuts stop to catch the next train.

If corporate sponsors buy into the MBTA's rehashed 2001 idea to sell the naming rights of subway stations, these monikers could stick.

"It's a possibility. We would incorporate both [the corporate name and the station name] and we would have to change signage and maps," said MBTA GM Rich Davey, who is hoping the idea would conquer the fiscal 2012 deficit and avoid a fare hike.

Davey said some universities, which he wouldn't name, showed interest in buying naming rights. He also said corporate sponsors have had a desire for name ownership.

The MBTA recently put out a Request For Proposal for a consultant to handle the bidding process for those rights, he said.

Ten years ago, former state Transportation Secretary Kevin Sullivan tried to raise $22 million for the T by letting companies name stations, but ultimately there were no takers.

But since then, Davey said other agencies have had success with the idea and he thinks it could now work in the Hub.

Davey said if a passenger has enough cash, the station could don any name that person chooses — within reason.

"I wouldn't want someone with a lot of money who wanted to be clever and joking to confuse customers, or duplicate station names, though."

Name that station

If there is interest in naming rights, the T wouldn't be the first transit agency to sell out:

July 2011 Houston residents were asked to help name stations along new Metro light-rail routes

March 2011 The Wilmington Amtrak Station in Delaware was named after Vice President Joe Biden

June 2010 The Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority named Pattison Station the AT&T Station

June 2009 New York's MTA announced Barclays would put its name on the Atlantic Ave./Pacific Street station

What's in a name?

In 2005, while searching for a corporate sponsor, the current TD BankNorth Garden had auctions on eBay that allowed bidders to name the sport spot. A New York man won a bid to call the complex "the Derek Jeter Center" for a day, but the proposal was rejected. METRO

Ranking Boston

There is nothing fishy about Boston popping up in the Frommers 2011 guidebook. The travel company recently named Legal Seafood locations at Logan Airport among the county's 10 best airport dining experiences.

21, 2

According to a recent report released by Colliers International, a global real estate services firm, Boston ranked 21 worldwide for most expensive parking garages. The Hub ranked second in the nation, behind New York's $438 monthly average.

1

Size might matter to some people, but being small isn't so bad when it comes to sleeping arrangements, according to Travel + Leisure magazine. Boston's Eliot Hotel was named the "Top Small City Hotel" in the continental U.S. and Canada by the travel magazine this year.

4

Massachusetts is the fourth least-fat city in the U.S. according to a study conducted by the Trust for America's Health and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

Boston battling back against spree of violent crime

- Increase in homicides sparks increased police patrols
- Twenty-two alleged criminals arrested over weekend

Following a spate of recent homicides in the city, Boston police have increased patrols and placed close to two dozen alleged criminals behind bars.

According to BPD Commissioner Ed Davis, gun violence and drug and gang activity have led to an increase in homicides the last few weeks.

Over the weekend, Davis addressed the city saying police presence in parks and public areas would be increased to put an end to the violence.

Boston police also arrested 22 criminals Friday as part of their approach to quell the rise in drug crime.

With the help of the Youth Violence Strike Force and the Drug Control Unit the BPD rolled out "Operation Summer Sweep" in conjunction with "Operation Bad Rap" to put criminals with outstanding warrants who "impact the quality of life in Boston" in jail.

Police said charges from those arrests ranged from drug trafficking and distribution to assault and battery.

All 22 suspects will be arraigned in various district courts around the city to face individual charges, according to police reports.

Davis said undercover operations currently going on in the city would have an impact on the violence in the weeks to come.

Police also identified three victims from the July 4 week, which pushed the homicide rate to 24 deaths to date.

Study: Student aid doesn't fill up seats

Grant money may not help college students finish their degree, researchers report ◗ At-risk still benefit

A new study into the effects of financial aid to help needy people attend college has found that the money makes little difference to whether or not students completed their degree programs.

In fact, according to the Wisconsin Scholars Longitudinal Study, in some cases the money had a negative effect on college attendance and graduation

The research found that cash — including Pell Grants which have been awarded to 5.4 million needy American students — may benefit at-risk students considered more likely to drop out of college — but that the money might also make a student considered "most likely to succeed" more likely to leave without completing a degree.

The Wisconsin study began in 2008 and offered extra financial help of $3,500 a year to students who were already eligible for Pell Grants, which are capped at a maximum of $5,500.

"We find that students respond to formal cash incentives in unexpected ways," said the research authors, including Sara Goldrick-Rab of the University of Wisconsin.

EDUCATIONOPTION.COM

Taken for granted

Researchers surveyed 1,500 students — 600 of whom received extra cash through the Wisconsin scheme, and a further 900 who get only Pell Grants.

- The extra cash made no difference to college attendance and achievement.
- Insidehighered.com, which first reported the study, noted: "The overall results provide a bleak picture for the effects of financial aid: Few were positive, and some were negative."
- It said that even supporters of aid schemes such as Pell Grants accepted that the program had grown unsustainably and had to be cut.

▶ Murdoch and Brooks

Murdoch stands by his gal

LONDON. Media baron Rupert Murdoch flew into London yesterday to tackle a telephone-hacking scandal that has sent tremors through the British political establishment and may cost him a multibillion-dollar broadcasting deal.

Murdoch said that Rebekah Brooks — who was editor of the News of the World at a time when many of the alleged hacking incidents were taking place and who is the current chief executive of News Corp.'s News International arm — had his "total" support. She denies knowing of the practice during her watch. "I'm not throwing innocent people under the bus," he said. REUTERS

Pakistan cut off?

WASHINGTON. The United States is withholding some $800 million in military assistance to Pakistan in a show of displeasure over its cutback on U.S. trainers, limits on visas for U.S. personnel and other bilateral irritants, the Obama administration said yesterday.

Pakistani authorities have "taken some steps that have given us reason to pause on some of the aid which we're giving to the military," White House Chief of Staff William Daley said on ABC television's "This Week with Christiane Amanpour." REUTERS

Pressure rises for debt compromise

Treasury Secretary insists Democrats, Republicans will come to an agreement ◐ Warns of failure to agree ◐ Political game being played?

U.S. Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner warned yesterday that failure to raise the debt ceiling by Aug. 2 could mean "catastrophic damage" to the economy, and an agreement must be reached.

The Treasury has said the debt ceiling must be raised by Aug. 2 and credit-rating agencies have threatened to downgrade U.S. debt if there is a risk of default.

Republicans and Democrats are at odds over how to go about reducing the budget deficit, which lawmakers have tied to any agreement on raising the $14.3 trillion cap on U.S. borrowing authority.

"We have no option except to come together. And the question is, again, not whether we're going to have an agreement. We're going to have an agreement. The question is: Are we going to have an agreement that's going to be good for the economy?" Geithner said.

"This week, and certainly by the end of next week, we have to have agreement on the outlines of a package," he said.

President Barack Obama and House Speaker John Boehner were to meet with other congressional leaders at the White House late yesterday. The meeting comes one day after Boehner said he would only pursue a deficit-reduction package about half the size of the far-reaching $4 trillion deal favored by Obama. REUTERS

"There has to be a deal; failure is not an option. The question is how good a deal it's going to be."

U.S. space shuttle Atlantis arrived at the International Space Station yesterday to deliver a last batch of supplies to the orbiting outpost on the final flight of the U.S. shuttle program. After a 30-year history that has cost nearly $200 billion and claimed the lives of 14 astronauts, the shuttles are being retired to make way for a new generation of spacecraft that President Barack Obama says will put U.S. astronauts on Mars. Casey Anthony scam attacks Facebook users

Warning: There's a new Internet scam afoot involving the Casey Anthony trial, the woman accused but then acquitted last week of killing her 2-year-old daughter.

A post on Facebook promises a video of a Casey Anthony confession, or a link to a video chat. Ignore it, experts warned yesterday.

The links will download malware onto users' computers.

The Facebook teaser shouts "BREAKING NEWS - Leaked Video of Casey Anthony CONFESSING to Lawyer!"

But clicking on the link takes users to an "age verification" box that reads: "Are you older than 13 years of age? Click "Jaa" button to confirm and play video."

Suleman: "How would you like me to keep eight 2-year-olds quiet?" (A good question, in theory.)

Stars offer sneak peak at new season of 'Damages'

Drama moves to DirecTV for fourth season ◗ That means there will be cussing in Patty Hewes' office ◗ Glenn Close on the show's success abroad

GETTY IMAGES

Top attorney Patty Hewes (Glenn Close) and her protegee Ellen Parsons (Rose Byrne) are back for Season 4 of "Damages," premiering Wednesday at 10 p.m. on DirecTV. Joining the power duo this season, which focuses on the ethics of private military companies, are John Goodman, Dylan Baker and Chris Messina.

"[Co-creators] Dan [Zelman], Glenn [Kessler] and I feel very lucky that each season we've been joined by amazing actors who have wanted to jump off the edge of the cliff with us," co-creator Todd A. Kessler remarks. "This season in particular was one where there was a mystery at the center of it and Dylan, John and Chris were all game for that exploration."

"He thinks he's a wonderful guy. He's extremely religious and patriotic. He's doing God's work on earth by helping the United States of America."
JOHN GOODMAN, ON HIS POLEMICAL CHARACTER

Season 4 marks the return of Byrnes' character to Patty's firm, Hewes & Associates; and Close was quick to offer praise for the move.

"I really missed it when Rosie was at the DA's office," Close says. "We missed her on the set. And even though she's there just to borrow an office and use the resources, Patty has her, as she thinks, under her wing again. And the relationship is much more complex than it was initially."

Canceled by FX, the show found a new home on DirecTV and can thus make use of profanity and some extra violence that may not have been appropriate for FX. "Damages" is also a huge hit internationally, and regardless of its original cancellation in the U.S., Close was able to speculate as to why that may be.

"I'm just a believer in good writing," she says. "We don't have the largest audience on television, but I've always been very impressed with how smart they are, and I think that's a huge compliment."

Goodman gave some details about his controversial character, the head of a security group providing the U.S. with defense in Afghanistan.

"He's extremely religious and patriotic," Goodman says. "He's doing God's work on earth by helping the United States of America."

Baker says, for the most part, he enjoyed working with Goodman.

"The first couple of times that John and I had nude scenes, though," Baker jokes, "we felt that they were a little gratuitous."

Q&A

On loss

Diana would have been 50 this month. You obviously still miss her.
Bless her. I'm the only royal ex-wife out here. Without her, I'm the only one having to do it on my own — with no support structure. It's difficult, because you are alone.

Loss is a key theme of the book. Your mother died in a car accident, your father from a long illness — and they divorced when you were young. What would you say if you could speak to them again?
That I love them, that I forgive them, that they have two wonderful granddaughters and that I'm a brilliant mum.

She's Fergalicious

The Duchess of York talks to us about her turbulent past and her new show on Oprah's OWN network 'Fergie-baiting sells newspapers'

Sarah Ferguson, the Duchess of York, has written a book, "Finding Sarah," detailing her "journey to find herself" a year after she was taped by a journalist asking for cash for access to her former husband, Prince Andrew of the British royal family. She starred in a docu-series of the same name for Oprah Winfrey's OWN network. The duchess dishes with us:

In the last few days, U.K. newspapers have published highly critical articles about you and your book. Do you ever get used to it?
I've had it for more than 20 years. I can't win with them. It's not a lot of fun, but Fergie-baiting sells newspapers.

Even the U.S. media criticized some of the things you did on the OWN shows.
Dr. Phil said I was addicted to approval. He was right, and my journey in the last year taught me that. I'm recovering from the need for approval. The media can say what they like — I've learned to live through it, and anyway the OWN series gave me friendships with Oprah, Dr. Phil and Suze Orman.

Do you recognize yourself on the video where you were set up by the journalist?
No. It was a crisis point for me, but I'm almost grateful because it forced me to confront my problems. This book and the journey I undertook are the result.

You make constant references to how wonderful your ex-husband, Prince Andrew, is. Can you ever be happy without being with him?
He is a wonderful man — my ideal, as I describe him in the book. Who knows what may happen? METRO

Q&A

Do you ever wish your daughters were not princesses?

Sometimes, yes. They live under the spotlight. But good can come of it. The hat that Beatrice wore to the Royal Wedding in April (and which was widely mocked) sold for $132,000 for UNICEF.

Young, sexy and 'Hideous'

Mary Shelley had said that invention 'does not consist in creating out of void but out of chaos' and as Holland Productions' latest reveals, in the summer of 1816, the young 'Frankenstein' author walked it like she talked it

By the tender age of 19, Mary Shelley had lost her mother and her child, battled depression and written an iconic horror novel, "Frankenstein."

How she accomplished the latter feat is the subject of the Boston Playwrights Theatre's "Hideous Progeny." It begins on a summer night in 1816. Young, yet legendary poet Lord Bryon — the Justin Bieber of the time — and his friends are vacationing in Switzerland.

"They're teenagers left to their own devices, essentially. There's a lot of sex and a lot of drinking and a lot of secrets," explains Krista D'Agostino, the play's director. "The difference is that these guys have a hell of a lot of talent and ambition."

"There's a lot of sex and a lot of drinking and a lot of secrets. The difference is that these guys have a hell of a lot of talent and ambition."
KRISTA D'AGOSTINO, DIRECTOR

When Byron challenges the group to a ghost stories contest, Shelley scribes a now-familiar tale about a doctor and his disastrous creation.

Most readers don't realize the parallel between the story and the young author's life, how themes of immortality and absent maternal figures dominate both.

"A lot of people look at 'Frankenstein' as this warning against the rapid transformation of the soon-to-be industrialized world, and it's easy to just look at it as that," says D'Agostino. "But in this play, the correlation to Shelley's life is so obviously there."

It makes sense that the mastermind behind the gruesome sci-fi book would have a heartbreaking backstory.

"She lived her life through death and carried it everywhere," says D'Agostino. "And that's what enabled her to write 'Frankenstein.'"

Kevin James' animal magnetism

The 'King of Queens' star acts opposite a gorilla and Cher in his latest family comedy 'We just wanted it to be a funny, funny movie for everybody,' he says

Does the idea of Kevin James starring in a comedy alongside a bunch of talking zoo animals sound ridiculous? Maybe a little corny? Kevin James himself would agree with that.

"I was immediately not into doing an animal movie," he confesses. "It just felt so kinda goofy to me to do it, and then I started thinking about it more. If we could make it a great story where you didn't need animals — they're just kind of like buddies that could add to the film — I started getting more and more interested in it."

That's how the "King of Queens" star made his peace with starring in "Zookeeper," in which he plays an animal lover who feels he must ditch the job he enjoys to impress an ex who is reconsidering him. Once the animals reveal they can talk, they coach James' character on how to win his lady back.

Quoted

"I've always loved physical comedy and putting something physical in all the movies that we do. I loved Jackie Gleason — anybody who was big and could move, I like a lot."
KEVIN JAMES

The actor is pleased with the film, but working directly with the live zoo animals was another story.

"The bears were close to us and all I would do was plan my escape route," he says. "Like, 'I know the cameraman's a smoker. I could push him in the way and then I'll be back in my trailer watching "SportsCenter."' That's the way I would plan it, and it was scary at times."

The animals are voiced by Hollywood juggernauts like Adam Sandler, Cher, Nick Nolte, Sylvester Stallone and Jon Favreau, all of whom, James says, were excited about the strength of the film's script.

"They felt like it was a good movie and they jumped on board, and so it makes it easier for any character when you know who is playing that part," he says about the process of acting with their vocal performances in mind.

One thing the star is also adamant about was his desire to make a family film.

"We just wanted it to be a funny, funny movie for everybody, where you can feel comfortable bringing your kids," he says. "I've gone to movies with my kids and I'm bored out of my skull. There's just no comedy for adults so I wanted something where it's comedy for everybody."

LaBeouf's latest tops box office again

Big-budget action film "Transformers: Dark of the Moon" won the battle of the North American box office for the second straight week, churning up $47 million and easily beating two new comedies, according to studio estimates yesterday.

Ticket sales for the third installment of the "Transformers" films about shape-shifting aliens eclipsed adult-targeted comedy "Horrible Bosses," which took in $28 million, and family film "Zookeeper," the weekend's number three movie with $21 million.

"Dark of the Moon," the third installment in the "Transformers" franchise, was released by Paramount Pictures, a unit of Viacom Inc. Directed by Michael Bay, it stars series original Shia LaBeouf and Rosie Huntington-Whiteley, who replaces Megan Fox. REUTERS

New job, same company

One of my good friends is working for a major corporation in a role that no longer challenges him. He's been in his position for over a year now and is interested in doing something completely different inside the same company, but he's concerned that it will hurt him politically if he announces that he wants to transfer to a different department. Here are some tips for a smooth transition:

Be honest and up front with your manager: Most companies want you to stay in your role for at least a year. Your manager should be the first to know about your desire to move across the organization, because he can recommend you for a new position and connect you to the hiring manager. If you make it known that you're looking to move without telling your boss, it might get back and make him look bad.

Network with employees who have the job you want: Through your internal social network, LinkedIn or referrals, you should pinpoint who is already doing what you want to do across your company. Then, contact them directly to find out more about them, how they like their roles and what their jobs consist of. By forming relationships with these employees, it will help your chances at securing a new job.

Don't slack off: It's very easy to lose focus at your job if you're searching for a new one. The best way to get promoted is to be extremely good at what you're currently doing first.

When your spouse is also a co-worker

▶ When you're working together, you're together a lot. Find ways to create personal space and boundaries.

THINKSTOCK

▶ It can be an ideal working situation or a total HR disaster ▶ Why you need to create boundaries both at home and in the office to be successful ▶ How to make your other co-workers feel comfortable

It's one thing to be married to your job. But to be married to someone else who works there? Couples who clock into the same office also share commutes and professional aspirations — a situation that needs to be carefully managed.

"A lot of people do it extremely well, and it's really common," workplace relationship guru Courtney Anderson says. "It's a great way to maximize your resources and benefits; and when it works, it works amazingly."

And when it doesn't? You could get fired and divorced by the same boss — ouch. Here's how to stay on the right track:

Keep it seriously professional

From the outside

When creating a plan to work together, don't forget about your co-workers.

▶ "It should seem almost weird from the outside," Anderson says. "People will say 'Oh, that's your husband? But you seem so formal with them.' But why shouldn't you be formal? Team members aren't there to see you patting each other on the butt."

"When it's done right, people take their work very seriously," Anderson says. "They're not like, 'Can you file this business report, oh honey, I love you, can you pick up the kids?'"

It's all about creating — and then staying within — the lines, agrees "Office Mate" author Helaine Olen, who has worked alongside her husband for five years. "You cannot use your spousal relationship in any way, shape or form to get a favor," she emphasizes.

Give yourself space

The tough part about splitting an office with your soul-mate isn't finding a way to work together, it's finding a way to be apart. "There is obviously a thing called too much togetherness," Olen warns. "Be careful about that. Commute to work separately — it's a really neat solution to the problem. It gives you some time to be apart."

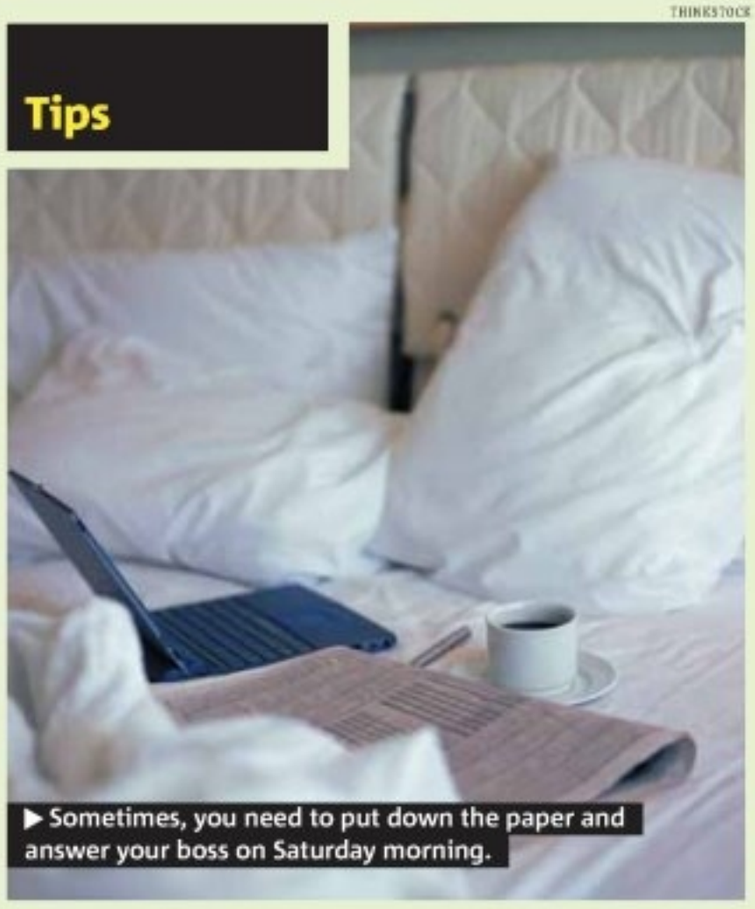
Expert advice for managing your weekend inbox

Tips



▶ Sometimes, you need to put down the paper and answer your boss on Saturday morning.

THINKSTOCK

In a perfect world, it wouldn't even be possible to access your work e-mail from home. But in the real world, plenty of us are expected to check inboxes after hours. According to a new survey by the career experts at Right Management, one in three employees gets e-mails from their bosses over the weekend that they are expected to reply to.

More than 560 people responded to the poll, which specifically asked if workers were expected to reply and not just receiving general office updates. It's another symptom, says Right Management vice president Gary Bennett, of our increasingly wired off-work hours. "Advances in technology have enabled a 24/7 working environment," he says. "Employees need to discuss communication expectations with managers and agree on what is realistic and what is not. Gain a mutual understanding for when something really warrants the employee's response over a weekend and when it doesn't."

As a general rule, Bennett advises waiting until Monday to respond when a message isn't time-sensitive. And when should you hit reply? If the message is marked with the dreaded, red "urgent" flag — or "if it directly relates to a project you are driving and has implications on anticipated results." METRO/MW Survey says ...

"Does your boss send you work-related e-mails over the weekend and expect you to respond?"

- Yes, often: 33 percent
- Only from time to time: 30 percent
- Never: 37 percent

How to level the other playing fields

DIGITAL VISION

▶ Opportunities outside the classroom are a valuable part of the college experience.

Sociologist Jenny Stuber has devoted her career to studying inequality in higher education. Her first book, "Inside the College Gates: How Class and Culture Matter in Higher Education" (Lexington Books), looks at the role extracurricular activities play in maintaining class structures.

How are extracurricular activities in college different than in high school?

There are more of them to navigate and they have higher stakes. Suddenly there are research opportunities, internships, Greek life, et cetera. Some students are better prepared to navigate that — based on past experiences — than others.

How can colleges make this situation better?

There's a long generational history of people with a social class advantage being able to reproduce that advantage in universities. Students from working-class backgrounds are always going to be playing catchup in the big picture. But in the small picture, there are things colleges can and should do. It's really a lot of intense work to create smaller learning units, to be very intentional about how residential life is set up and to reduce barriers to living on campus.

One child can't tell her story

In my opinion, any parent that waits 31 days to report a child missing is either insane, covering it up or both. Alas, what the verdict of "not guilty" has done for Casey Anthony is to turn her into a star. She'll pose in Playboy or Penthouse and be paid a king's ransom to tell her side of the story. A-list actors will want to play her in a movie with a $300,000,000 budget. All the while, a child is dead and will never be able to tell her side of the story. ANTHONY P. JOHNSON, VIA E-MAIL

Nuclear threat is still strong

The disaster at Fukushima reminded us of the dangers of nuclear power. Nuclear weapons are still around too — many thousands — even if we rarely think about them. EVA S. MOSELEY, CAMBRIDGE

Lies, damned lies — and news

CBS recently faked images of a fireworks show. Lying mass media is not a recent or infrequent thing. It is hard to come up with actual interesting news while trying so hard to divert attention away from all the truly awful stuff like the implementation of Bankster-owned fascism in American government and the total destruction of the poor and middle class. CHARLES MICHAEL COUCH, VIA E-MAIL

More thoughts on gay marriage

RE: "DO, DON'T LET FREEDOM RING": I don't understand the preoccupation and fear some males have toward same-sex marriage. They fear two men having sex and getting married but nothing of two women. Gentleman, if you don't want to marry another man, don't do it! In my life experience, those who yell the most about this issue are probably wishing the most to lie next to another man. EFRAIN ACEVEDO, VIA E-MAIL

Sean Cassidy's letter rebutting a private contract argument on gay marriage suggests that instances of "polygamy, polyandry and incestuous relations" would increase if the government stayed out of marriage. This represents less than one-one hundredth of one percent of our population. To think that the government can make some undesired practice go away by making it illegal is naive. Illegal drugs still find their way to willing consumers despite the "war on drugs." KELLY DONNOE, VIA E-MAIL

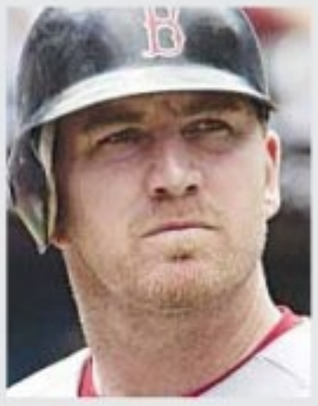
GRADING SOX, SO FAR

Boston's 2011 started terribly But they've turned it around, and they're leading the AL East into the All-Star break Thank A-Gonz, Ellsbury for that But not Lackey METRO

A — Adrian Gonzalez
He's not cheap, but he's worth it. The offseason acquisition is threatening to top the AL in all three Triple Crown categories. We knew he'd love Fenway, but this is ridiculous.

A — Jacoby Ellsbury
Going into this year, the CF's best full-season OBP was .355. He's 20 points better than that this year — making him the ideal leadoff hitter. After an ugly 2010, it's welcome.

D+ — J.D. Drew
Theo Epstein has made some good moves as Red Sox GM. Signing Drew to a five-year, $70 million contract wasn't one of them. At least this is the last year.



B — Kevin Youkilis
Even a mediocre year by Youk's inflated standards is a great one for most 3Bs. There is, however, plenty of room for improvement for the newly minted AL All-Star.

B+ — Dustin Pedroia
It's more of the same from Pedroia — a lock for an .800-odd OPS year in and year out. We're loving the 16 first-half stolen bases, too.

A — David Ortiz
If not for A-Gonz, we'd be riding the "Papi for MVP" bandwagon. A .969 OPS is his best since 2007, and he's hitting better than .300 for the first time since that same charmed year.

C+ — Jed Lowrie
Until landing on the 15-day DL on June 17, the young SS was having a decent year ... but not one that lived up to last season. The .319 OBP could use a boost.

C — Carl Crawford
It's hard to know what to make of the big-money LF. He had a horrendous April, but followed that with a very solid May. June looked OK, too, before his DL stint.

C– — Marco Scutaro:
Given the choice, we'd rather start Lowrie at SS. Scutaro's never been a power hitter, but he's shown absolutely no pop this season.

B — Jason Varitek:
We're grading on a curve here. Nobody expected a thing from the captain, but he's delivered a 2007-level campaign — albeit while splitting time with Jarrod Saltalamacchia.

A — Josh Beckett
He's been the rock in a painful year for the rotation, earning his All-Star nod with a 2.27 ERA, a .095 WHIP, an 8-3 record and 94 strikeouts in 111 innings. That's Cy Young stuff.

B — Jon Lester
The LHP has done everything asked of him. His 3.31 ERA, 1.21 WHIP and .231 BAA are right in line with his career norms. If he's healthy, expect more of the same in Half 2.

F — John Lackey
Simply terrible. Yeah, he was fine Saturday — but Lackey has shown he can't be trusted to string together decent starts. He'll be lucky to stick in the rotation all season.

B — Jonathan Papelbon
Ignore the inflated ERA — Pap has delivered again in 2011. He's striking out a ton of batters, walking few and working his way out of jams. We'll take it.

A — Daniel Bard
Papelbon had better stay sharp, because he's got a studly young arm after his job. Bard might actually be better than he was last year — a 0.81 WHIP is the stuff of All-Stars.

In the news

Red Sox finish sweep

The Red Sox finished the first half in style yesterday, beating the Orioles 8-6 to complete a four-game sweep and enter All-Star break on a six-game winning streak. It was enough to stay one game ahead of the Yankees in the AL East.

A miracle finish for US

After one of the greatest World Cup games ever — men's or women's — the U.S. National Women's Soccer Team is two wins away from its third crown.

Abby Wambach scored a 122nd-minute header — the latest goal ever in a Women's World Cup — to tie the Americans' quarterfinal against Brazil at 2, and a Hope Solo save in the shooout punched a U.S. ticket to Wednesday's semifinal against France.

"I'm at a loss and I literally cannot believe what just happened. But we've got two games left."
ABBY WAMBACH

The U.S. took the lead in the second minute, but Brazil tied it in the 66th on a controversial PK. Marta put the Brazilians ahead early in extra time. METRO

Referees don't cost USWNT

Abby Wambach's injury-time header saved the U.S. after a day of suspect calls nearly cost it.

Rachel Buehler was sent off in the 65th minute for a middling foul in the box. Hope Solo saved the ensuing PK, but Brazil was given a re-do — and Solo a yellow card — for the U.S. keeper apparently leaving her line. Replays showed she didn't, but Brazil netted the second chance. METRO

France next foe

Yesterday's semifinal victory earned the U.S. a spot in the Women's World Cup semifinals against France.

The French played to a 1-1 draw with England on Saturday before winning, 4-3, on penalties. France finished second in Group A. The semi is set for 11:30 a.m. Wednesday. METRO

Americans are favorites

With Brazil and host Germany falling in the quarterfinals, the U.S. is left as the odds-on favorite to hoist its third World Cup.

They'll play France in one semifinal. The other will match Sweden, which upset the Americans in Group C play, and Japan, which squeaked into the knockout rounds after finishing second in Group B. METRO

Crashes continue at the Tour

The carnage continued at the Tour de Crash — er, France — yesterday.

Contender Alexandre Vinokourov retired from the race after an accident midway through the 129-mile ninth stage, defending champion Alberto Contador was caught up in a crash of his own and two leading riders were hit by a TV car late, but finished the stage.

Luis Leon Sanchez won the race from Issoire to Saint-Flour. Thomas Voeckler, who finished second, picked up enough time on Thor Hushovd to claim the overall leader's yellow jersey.

But the real story was another day of blood on the roads — capped when a TV support car swerved into Juan Antonio Flecha, who went down, sending Johnny Hoogerland flying head over pedals into a roadside barbed wire fence.

Today is the first scheduled rest day of the prestigious race. METRO
